THE HAWK'S NEST.

BY BRET HARTE.

From The Chicago Art Review for March. We checked our pace-the red road sharply

We heard the troubled flow Of the dark olive depths of pines, resounding A thousand feet below;

Above the tumult of the canyon, lifted, The grey hawk breathless hung, Or on the hill a winged shadow drifted Where furze and thorn-bush clung; Or where, half-way, the mountain side was furrowed With many a seam and sear, Or some abandoned tunnel dimly burrowed-

A mole-hill seen so far; We looked in sllence down across the distant

Unfathomable reach, A silence broken by the guide's consistent And realistic speech;

"Walker of Murphy's blew a hole through

For telling him he lied, Then up and dusted out of South Hornitos Across the long Divide.

"We ran him out of Strong's and up through Eden. And 'cross the ford below,

And up this mountain (Peter's brother leadin').

And me and Clark and Joe.

"He fou't us game; somehow, I disremember Jest how the thing kem round: Some say 'twas wadding, some a scattered

From fires on the ground. But in one minute all the hill below him

Was just one sheet of flame; Guardin' the crest, Sam Clark and I called to

And-well, the dog was game. "He made no sign-the fires of hell were round The pit of hell below.

We sat and waited, but we never found him, And then we turned to go.

"And then-you see that rock that's grown so bristly With chapparel and tan-Suthin' crept out-it might have been a grizzly, It might hev been a man. "Suthin' that howled and gnashed its teeth and shouted In smoke and dust and flame; Suthin' that sprang into the depths about it, Grizzly or man-but game !

"That's all. Well, yes, it does look rather risky, And kinder makes one queer

And dizzy looking down. A drop of whisky Ain't a bad thing right here!'

A NEW INVENTION FOR LIFTING WATER.

We had the pleasure Wednesday of witnessing a successful operation of the Patent Compound Propeller Pump, made by the Bridesburg Manufacturing Company, of Philadelphia, for the Glen Carbon Colliery, on the estate of William Richardson, deceased, in this county. This coulties is leased and worked by Messes Lohn colliery is leased and worked by Messrs. John Lucas & Co.

In our judgment, the title of pump is a misnomer, as it would be more proper to call it a water elevator. The peculiar features of this elevator are, a cast-iron pipe about eight inches in diameter and 300 feet long, cast in longitudinal sections, and bolted together, each section being six feet in length. In the intervals be-tween these sections are shorter sections one foot long, constructed in the same manner, with bearings supporting a shaft made of steel one and three-fourth inches in diameter, extending the entire length of the pipe. Mounted on this shaft, at intervals of about three feet, are screw propellers, with two blades seven and a half inches in diameter, with an angular pitch of 65 degrees, and revolving with the shaft. Midway between these propellers, and attached to the walls of the pipe, are wings or blades of the same pitch and form as the blades of the probut of a reverse angle. At the lower end of the elevator is a basket or guard of castiron to prevent stones, coal, or other obstructions from passing into the pipe. The top of the elevator has a spout or nozzle to direct the stream of water as it passes out, above which is a very novel and ingenious contrivance to support the weight of the shaft, with its propellers and the column of water. There has been considerable delay in putting the elevator into operation from the want of an adequate support for the heavy column of water, but this difficulty has been entirely, successfully overcome.

There is a disc about sixteen inches in diameter secured permanently to the top of the pipe, upon which rests a ring of brass about twelve inches in diameter, on top of which is another disc about fourteen inches in diameter, and embracing the outer periphery of the brass ring. This upper disc is permanently secured to the propeller shaft. By means of a small donkey pump water is forced between the two dies under sufficient pressure to slightly separate them, so that the top disc, propeller shaft and column of water are supported by the film of water between them, and thus the rotation of the pro-peller shaft revolving on the water causes only very small amount of friction. The donkey pump receives the water from a small tank or barrel, and any surplus water forced between the discs raises the ring of brass, and is discharged back into the same tank. The propeller shaft is revolved by a wire rope passing around a groove pulley above the upper disc, and which is driven by a steam engine.

On revolving the shaft, a constant and solid stream of water flows from the elevator, at the rate of 1700 gallons per minute—the propeller lifting the water on to the stationary wings or blades above it, by which it is supported, and from which it is taken by the next succeeding propeller, and so on until the water is dis charged, thus avoiding all valves or complicated machinery. The advantages claimed for this elevator are, economy in cost and running expenses, great simplicity and durability, small amount of friction, and ability to lift large bodies of water to any height with the smallest expenditure of power. This elevator appears to be peculiarly adapted for deep mines, where large quantities of water are to be raised, and they can be made of any size or capacity.

One is now being constructed of twenty inches diameter, and which will lift 10,000 gallons per minute, and which, we understand will shortly be thrown open for public exhibi-

A new engine is being placed in close contact with the elevator at Glen Carbon, on account of the difficulty experienced in transmitting power from an old slope engine, which is located at a considerable distance from it. It is claimed that this important invention will greatly lessen the cost of mining, not only on account of the comparatively small expense of the apparatus, but also the reduced expenditure for power, and which will lessen the pre-sent difficulties and dangers attending the removal of water from mines. Should this pump come up to the expecta-tions of the proprietors on further trial, it will be a great acquisition in the working of collieries that are troubled with water to such an extent as to render their working unprofitable.

The invention is owned by the Hydrostatic and Hydraulic Company of Pennsylvania, of which Colonel Barton H. Jenks is the President. As all our operators are deeply interested in any new improvement that is simple and lessens expenses, they will watch its working with great interest.—Miners' Journal.

Senatorial Caucus. Special Despatch to the Evening Telegraph. The Senate after transacting some unimportant business went into Executive session, and confirmed a large number of nominations. They are now in caucus considering Mr. Morton's bill to protect life and property in the Southern States. Quite a number of Senators are in favor of adjourning and The Motion to Adjourn on Saturday is now under discussion in caucus. After filibustering for nearly three hours Butler asked leave to have his Ku-klux bill printed, but objection was made. Speaker Blaine, Dawes, and others, who regard the passage of any bill now as hopeless, propose to appoint a special committee, to whom the bill be referred, with power to sit during the recess and investigate the whole matter and report a bill next December. A resolution to this effect has just been offered by Mr. Lynch.

CONGRESS.

FORTY-SECOND TERM-FIRST SESSION. Senate.

Mr. Wilson introduced a bill to carry into effect the decision of the Supreme Court relating to bounles of soldlers enlisted between May 3d and July The bill gives one hundred dollars bounty to honorably discharged soldiers enlisted between the dates named. A number of bills were introduced and referred.

Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, called up the bill to authorize the issue of duplicate checks of disbursing officers. Passed.

On motion of Mr. Trumbull, the House bills repealing the duties on coal and salt were read a second time. Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, moved the reconsideration of the vote upon the passage of the one-hundred-dollar bounty bill. He said he had been informed the bill would involve the Government in an expen-diture of eight millions of dollars.

He then offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the actual unt of expense. Mr. Wilson said he would not object to the reconsideration. His information was that the number of soldiers entitled to the bounty would be between four and five thousand and the aggregate of expense would be about$410,000. The failure of Congress to carry into effect the decision of the Supreme Court had occasioned general disappointment and complaint, and whether the aggregate was larger or smaller, this legislation be passed. Mr. Morrill's resolution prevailed without objec-

The following additional bills were introduced:

Mr. Hamlin, to provide for the completion of the tympanum of the south wing of the Capitol Building, directing the Secretary of the Interior to contract for the execution of Milis' group of statuary, commemorative of the late epoch in American his-tory, and adapt the same to the tympanum of the southeast portico of the Capitol, and appropriating

Mr. Wilsen, in relation to additional bounties, providing that the widow, children, or father and mother of any soldier who enlisted for a less period than one year and who was killed or died in service, shall be entitled to receive the same bounties as have been granted by law where the soldier enlisted for two years.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Anthony's resolution to limit business to legislation upon the South came up, but was informally laid aside, and the appropriation bill supplying deficiencies was made the first business in At 1:10 the Senate went into Executive session and

On motion of Mr. Wood, it was resolved that the Committee on Foreign Affairs, when appointed, be requested to examine into and report at the next session of Consress, whether the territory of Lower California would be a desirable acquisition to the United States, and if so to make such recommendations looking to that object as may seem to that committee just and expedient with reference thereto.

Mr. Eidridge gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill for the suppression of the Ku-Kiux in New Hampshire.

The Breaker said that the introduction of such a bill would only be in order when the contigurants.

The Speaker said that the Introduction of Such a bill would only be in order when the gentleman's State was called.

Mr. Randall offered a resolution that when the House adjourn to-day it be to Saturday next, and when it adjourn on the latter day it be to Tuesday next. The resolution was rejected—72 against 83.

Mr. Randall then modified his resolution so as to provide for an adjournment until Saturday next. The question was decided in the negative—yeas, 82: nays, 107.

Mr. Butler gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to protect peaceable and loyal citizens of the United States in their lives and property, and asked that it be printed for the information of the House.

There were objections on the Democratic side of the House.
